

SHE-CAN BUILDS FEMALE GLOBAL LEADERSHIP

SHE-CAN identifies smart, low-income young women from post-conflict countries who are passionate about changing their nations. We then pair our scholars with mentor teams to help them win scholarships to top U.S. colleges. As graduates, our scholars return home equipped with powerful connections, leadership training, and the tools needed to be leaders in their communities. We currently operate in Rwanda, Cambodia, and Liberia.

Since 2011 SHE-CAN has grown to influential levels:

- 74 low-income women have won full-ride scholarships
- 27 graduates are emerging leaders
- 332 professionals are SHE-CAN mentors supporting our scholars with love and guidance
- $19 million in scholarship funds have been awarded to date
- 27 U.S. colleges such as Dartmouth and Wellesley are enriched by SHE-CAN scholars
- 13 of the 27 U.S. colleges have joined the SHE-CAN Scholarship Coalition by committing to fund full-ride scholarships:
  - Babson College
  - Beloit College
  - Bucknell University
  - Gettysburg College
  - Lafayette College
  - Lewis & Clark College
  - Muhlenberg College
  - Northwestern University
  - Spelman College
  - Syracuse University
  - University of Minnesota
  - University of Portland
  - University of San Francisco
- 39 organizations hosted interns including Boeing, WorldBridge Group, Kasha, and Zipline

SHE-CAN and our expansive network believe that advancing women into leadership positions changes the world faster. In 30 to 40 years, SHE-CAN, our mentors, our colleges, and our private sector partners will have supported large, influential cohorts of women, born and raised in poor circumstances in the aftermath of conflict, who will be among the most educated in their communities and nations. These up-and-coming leaders are on a trajectory to shape laws, peace negotiations, how governments and businesses are run, and how society will address some of the most pressing issues of our time.
